

July 31, 2026

LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION

Dear Madames and Sirs,

My name is Thom Kennon, adjunct professor at New York University's School of Professional Services. I write to unequivocally recommend Poyuan Wang, a student of mine here in the Master's in Integrated Marketing program at NYU (Department of Programs in Business).

I have had the opportunity to teach and learn from Poyuan in the graduate program here. I myself am a career strategist-consultant, working for global brands across all categories, and I teach all my students to view the world of humans and businesses through the lens of deep strategic insight. Poyuan is one of the rarest of students I have worked with in the seventeen years of my teaching at NYU – they have a probative and curious yearning required to surface insight and imagine a strategy – brand, business, product or marketing – worthy of serving that missing need within a company's stakeholder base.

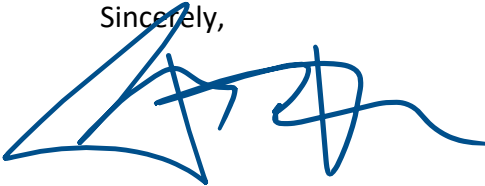

I've spent a considerable amount of time these past years trying to help grad students discover, unlock and hone their particular personal and professional skills which I know from a lifetime of business experience are lacking in the world. I suggest to my students there is an extremely valuable strategic skill or talent which is equal parts analytic, strategic and creative. Poyuan has been one of those students I count as having demonstrated this unique blend of skills.

Specifically, I can attest to Poyuan's expanded skills and talents to include –

- Creative strategy and audience insights development
- Content creation and execution (Poyuan led his project team's direction and production of their filmed the campaign content)
- Growth analysis, KPI dashboards, and data visualization
- Team leadership and presentation direction, Poyuan was the clear leader of his project team, as we clear in their final presentation

I have been teaching graduate-level business and marketing courses across multiple universities and programs for the past seventeen years. It is rare I have the privilege to recommend a young professional of Poyuan's caliber, and I do so here unequivocally and enthusiastically. I am available at trk5@nyu.edu and +1 347-331-8125 should you wish to further discuss Poyuan's qualifications to be considered for a particular role you are seeking to fill within your organization.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read 'TK', with a stylized flourish extending to the right.

Thomas Kennon
Adjunct Professor
NYU
Department of Programs in Business
School of Professional Studies
Master's in Integrated Marketing